

SURVEY SAYS?

Part of the Multi Media Mania family of game shows from the Gurus

Survey Says? is our rendition of the popular TV show in which two teams try to guess the top six answers from our question surveys.

Teams are either pre-selected or chosen at random. Survey Says? requires two teams of four to six players each. The computer will show a question on the screen. Material varies from pop culture to general material to your questions. The top six answers are hidden on the board.

Game Play —Team captains face off for control to place the first answer on the board. The first team to buzz in and place an answer is the controlling team. The controlling team either plays or passes to the other team. The answering team gets as many chances as necessary to find the most popular answers. After three strikes, the opposite team gets a chance to guess one of the remaining answers. If they are successful, they get all of the points.

Generally one round of three to five questions is played per game with multiple games played in a sixty minute program. (However, we can modify this to your needs).

Producer's note: From our experience, this game show goes great with all age groups because of its TV presence popularity, its simplicity, and its group nature. This game show is exciting, fun, versatile, and challenging. It is, by its design, different paced than some other game shows, including our own Interactive Trivia Blitz.
